*One of the strategies we've been using across campus to encourage engagement is to rethink how we hold conversations with each other. We've been testing, with positive initial results, moving away from traditional meeting structures like the presentation or the status report toward approaches that encourage everybody's contributions to the group's success. These protocols are making us rethink how we organize meeting space, how we configure groups, how we distribute participation and how we allocate time.

We're going to employ some of these approaches at this meeting (some of which may be familiar to you) to help us get your input on two topics:

- Innovation
- Inclusive Excellence
